Survey Fatigue?

Documents librarians have been asked to complete an increasing number of depository related surveys this year. There is growing evidence that many librarians are suffering from "survey fatigue," a condition that is characterized by either not responding to surveys or by making a minimal effort to respond.

There are valid reasons for this survey fatigue. This is a time when most libraries are experiencing increasing workload and decreasing or static resources. New formats also require a longer learning curve than in the past. And filling out even the simplest of surveys demands time and concentration.

But survey fatigue is occurring at a time when GPO and other agencies are making important decisions concerning the future of the Federal Depository Library Program. Librarians have often expressed a desire to have a greater voice in the direction of the Federal Depository Library Program. Surveys are one way in which librarians can express their views. And given the diversity of types and sizes of libraries involved in the Federal Depository Library Program, a survey response from only a small percentage of the community may not accurately reflect concerns and conditions in all the libraries.

Your cooperation in carefully completing and returning all of these surveys is greatly appreciated, as it will enable GPO to better serve its public.

Fill Out the Biennial Survey Correctly To Avoid Its Return to You!

Some depositories have been very quick in filling out and returning their 1991 Biennial Survey forms. LPS appreciates this fast action and thanks these libraries for their cooperation. However, many of the early returns are not filled out completely. Some questions have been disregarded altogether, or numbers have been omitted from the designated spaces, although the corresponding blocks have been filled in. LPS is returning these forms to the libraries, adding significantly to personnel and postage costs.

Libraries are asked to refer to pages 13-14 of the survey instructions for an example of a form filled out correctly. Please check your forms carefully before returning them!

ELECTRONIC CORNER

Question: We have selected a number of CD-ROMs through the Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP). Although most come with rudimentary, public domain software to provide access to the data, I would like to know where I can get other inexpensive (or free) software that has been created for use with the discs.

Response: Once again, Steve Hayes from the Hesburgh Library at Notre Dame, comes to the rescue. The following is a portion of a handout that Steve prepared, entitled "Preparing for the Electronic Library":

For CD-ROM software, consider:

I. U.S. Bureau of the Census, Electronic Bulletin Board (301)763-1568.

After dialing in and answering a few simple questions, you can access a variety of simple "retrieval and display" software via modem to use with CD-ROMs.

II. Center for Electronic Data Analysis
316 Stokely Management Center
Dept. of Marketing, Logistics, and Transportation
University of Tennessee
Knoxville TN 37996
(615)974-5311

The University of Tennessee Center, "...providing training, resources, software, and analysis to individuals using U.S. Census CD-ROM data...", maintains a list of vendors who sell software developed to access Census CD-ROMs as well as "shareware" products.

III. "Shareware"

"Shareware" is basically a system whereby the authors of the software retain the rights to the product under copyright laws and simply allow distribution of their system to be done freely or with few restrictions. You may request and examine the software and, if you decide to use it, you register your use with the author and usually pay a fee (ranging from $5.00 to $99.00).

Various shareware and "freeware" vendors exist. Here are two, but others may be found by looking at any popular computer magazine:

Public Brand Software
P.O. Box 51315
Indianapolis IN 46251

Calif. Freeware for IBM/Compatibles

IV. Associations

The Association of Public Data Users (APDU) was "...organized in 1976 to facilitate the utilization of public data through sharing knowledge about files and applicable software, exchange of documentation, and joint purchase of data." It is an excellent way of keeping up with new electronic information products. APDU concerns itself with all forms of public data, including magnetic tapes, CD-ROM and floppy diskettes. APDU publishes a newsletter 10 times each year. For more information, contact:

Association of Public Data Users
Princeton University Computing Center
87 Prospect Ave.
Princeton NJ 08544

Thanks once more, Steve!

Document librarians one and all: Please help us "share the wealth" of useful information. Have you created a handout for patrons or a tip or technique for using, storing, or disseminating your depository's electronic information that you think would benefit others? Send a description of what you have done (preferably on floppy diskette - WordPerfect 5.1 or ASCII) and we'll "pass it on" via this column. Submissions should be addressed to:

Class no.	Item no.	Status
D 7.24:	0314-P	Fuel Line The agency only published two issues of this publication in 1989 the Winter and Summer issues, and in 1990 only the Fall issue was published, in 1991 they will go back to being published quarterly.
E 3.11/17-8:	0435-E-18	Electric Power Monthly Beginning in January 1991, the Energy Information Administration is changing the cover dates on its monthly periodicals. Covers now will display the published date only. The published date will be displayed prominently on covers, title pages, and spines. As a result of the change, there will be no cover dates of October, November, or December 1990. Statistical continuity is not affected and the publication of current monthly statistics continues on the established schedule.
GS 1.15/5:990/3	0559-A-01	U. S. Real Property Sales List LPS has been informed by the agency that they cannot supply additional copies of the publication, and we cannot reprint under title 44, U. S. Code, section §1903, no rain check shortages will be filled.
I 28.76:	0639-G	Mineral Industry Surveys By now you should have gotten the combined, (Mar., Apr., May, & June) issue and you will be receiving the (July, Aug., Sept., Oct., & Nov.) combined issue, and with the December 1990, issue you again start receiving the issues monthly. The cut back was due to budget problems.
E 3.27/4:90/3	0429-T-49	EIA News Releases, Vol. 90, Issue 3, May-June The Department of Energy has informed LPS that they cannot provide sufficient copies of this publication for depository libraries, and LPS cannot reprint under title 44, U. S. Code, section §1903.

List of Superseded Documents Now Annotated for Regionals

The committee organized to annotate the List of Superseded Documents for regional depository libraries has completed its work; the annotated list is printed below. Titles marked by a bullet (•) should be retained by regional depository libraries; unmarked titles may be disposed of, once they have been superseded, according to normal weeding procedures. Selective depository libraries may discard any of the titles on the list once they have been superseded by a new edition or have met other conditions specified in Appendix C of the Instructions to Depository Libraries.

Much thought and effort went into this annotation, and the Library Programs Service thanks all the committee members who gave so generously of their time and expertise. The list as a whole is scheduled to be revised and updated, and a new committee to do this job will be named shortly.
